And when I speak about how this is being done by those who rule us, don't get me wrong. I do not know what the truth of this might be, but many features of our current system including the conduct of the Crown Prosecution Services cannot but encourage us to suspect such things. Similarly I get irritated when a set of rather dumb people set out to engineer. The extreme conditions of financial dependence and the need to recover minimum credibility in the relations with external creditors expressed itself in an excessive alignment with Germany, notably in the framework of the European Union. Ultimately the future of the EU will be decided by the quality of life economic prospects of ordinary people. A careful analysis of business-related dynamics of the Brexit process and the potential impact of the EU market becomes therefore necessary when the UK indeed breaks with the union.

Such seemingly contradictory positions partially stem from the fact that a more serious point is that committing ourselves increasingly to conform to the laws made in Brussels was part of a wider propensity of twentieth century governments to save the world by signing up to abstract propositions and declarations of rights. In America, capital and credit flowing from the rest of the country cushion the impact of a downturn in any one state.
