I know TV gets blamed for almost everything in American life, but as they endlessly say about computers, television is only a tool. The end of punishment, therefore, is no other, than to prevent others from committing the like offence. Whose reality are we talking about? Availableonline. These people, who had not hitherto been heard of, were, no doubt, in the wrong to have been born Waldensians; but that was their only crime. This sentiment is at once the effect and the cause of a very general ignorance concerning Voltaire; and it is a reproach to us. But what a strange constitution is that, where the government, which hath in its favour not only power but opinion, still more efficacious, yet fears its own subjects?
