Table 5 indicates unemployed individuals' expectations as to finding a job. PubMed Google Scholar. Labour market disadvantage, deprivation and mental health. Jones, S. Psychometric theory 3rd ed. The SHS has shown high internal consistency, high test-retest and self-peer correlations reliability and high convergent and discriminant validity. Hypothesis 5: People with different employment histories differ in their experiences of unemployment, the importance of work and job application behaviours. Moylan, S. Psychological and physical well-being during unemployment: a meta-analysis. The fact that gender, age, employment history and the length of time unemployed did not affect experiences of unemployment, the importance of work and job application behaviour indicates the pervasive effects of unemployment in the South African context. The financial implication of unemployment was also a very important theme.
