He holds her father, now married to Odette, in the highest esteem, and is awed by the beautiful sight of Mme Swann strolling in public. Proust, however, understands the role of memory, often shaped and renewed by desire, and how memory, albeit a tool for suffering, can be a tool for shaping and renewing existence s in a reality no longer found in the present, except voiced by our very words from our imagined thoughts which is also the act of storytelling, a truly mythological act of human existence and survival :.

BookDescriptionMarcelbringsAlbertinetolivewithhiminPariswherehetr me the problem has always been that Marcel's obsessive love for Albertine stretched credulity: the voice and sensibility of the narrator is so plainly that of a man who loves men, not women.
